Take a closer look at military 'bennies'

The Senate Armed Services Committee has completed hearings on bills that would prohibit members of the armed services from joining labor unions. Perhaps it will not be long before this legislation becomes law.

Until lately, the thought of labor unions in the military was so far-fetched that legislation hardly seemed necessary. But with some unions ready to mount organizing efforts on military installations, the need for laws banning such activity has become obvious.

Yet Congress should not think that banning union membership will eliminate the climate that has led unions to view the military as a "fertile field" for organizing efforts.

A major element in producing this "fertile field" has been the constant criticism lately — and some actual erosion — of benefits to military personnel. Vietnam brought the military into disrepute in some quarters, making it a convenient whipping boy for politicians and a target for cost-cutters on Capitol Hill and elsewhere in government.

Every year, for example, military commissaries come under attack in Congressional appropriations committees for making groceries available at discount prices. One would think from the criticism that the taxpayers are being ripped off to the tune of about $300 million a year by well-heeled generals and admirals loading up on cheap foodstuffs, when in fact the vast majority of commissary customers are families of enlisted personnel, some of whose income is near or below the poverty level, and of lower-ranking officers, who are hardly getting rich in the military.

If the government can provide about $80 million a year in subsidies for a few thousand tobacco farmers to grow a substance demonstrably bad for health, what's wrong with subsidizing commissary operations by $300 million a year to benefit about 2 million members of the armed services who are on call 24 hours a day to defend the country?

Double Dippers

There's also been a hullabaloo lately about "Double Dippers" — retired military people who work for the government and draw civilian pay while continuing to collect military pensions. The fact is that most of these "Double Dippers" are enlisted retirees whose average retirement pay is around $5,000 a year and whose civilian jobs are in the lower echelons of the civil service; but the critics focus on the 10 retired admirals and generals whose combined military pension and pay for top-level civilian jobs put their total compensation above that of Cabinet officers.

The "Double Dipper" controversy has triggered criticism of the entire military retirement system, which allows personnel to receive partial retirement pay after 20 years service and full retirement benefits after 30 years. Critics have suggested that early retirement be ended, that no retirement be paid before a certain age, that service personnel be required to contribute a portion of their active duty salaries toward retirement pay.

Nor are educational and medical benefits for the military what they used to be. And, promotions come slower nowadays.

Add in the frequent long hours — there's no overtime pay in the military — the regular uprooting of homes, the frequent family separations, and the possibility of risking life in defense of the United States or an ally. It takes some dedication, if not rose-colored glasses, to see military service as a really attractive life.

The retirement benefits, the medical services, the commissary privileges and the rest were offered to induce men and women to join and make a career of the military. The fewer benefits, the less attractive it becomes; already the military is having difficulty filling quotas for the all-volunteer services, and there is talk of returning to the draft.

Yes, Congress should ban unions from the armed forces. But Congress also ought not chip away at military benefits and contribute to a climate that fosters unionism. Congress is, in effect, the shop steward to which military men and women look for protection of their rights, privileges and a decent livelihood.

A few good strokes

Part of the new look of the Blessed Sacrament Chapel in the American Community Chapel on Huttenweg is a mural painted by Air Force MSGT Mike Baker. Painting since 1970, the master sergeant was tapped for the job weeks before leaving for the States to retire after 20 years service. Applying his experience with oils and acrylics, the artist gave the wall a blue background shaded into white with figures gilded in gold. (Photo by Marilyn Stringer)

Goats can float with 3-6ers

by Peter Palmer
3-6 correspondent

Passing voyeurs had their doubts, but the "Goats" did float. On a quiet morning last week shortly after the typical Berlin morning drizzle, a line of vehicles made their way from the front gate of McNair Barracks through the Grunewald and down to the riverside.

There was an aura of excitement among those driving, TCing and riding the vehicles. Rampant jokes about the upcoming event sparked the soldiers even more, although it was just another yearly occurrence to some of the more weathered troopers.

One by one, APCs and Gamma Goats came down to the Havel River for their annual baptism as the 3d Bn., 6th Inf., conducted its yearly Vehicle Swimming Exercise, commonly referred to as the "Goat Float."

The purpose of the exercise was to test the vehicles' amphibious capabilities. Each "Goat" carried a minimum of 300 pounds combat load. APCs carried their equivalent amount.

As each vehicle made its splashing entry into the river, passers-by in canoes, kyacks and speedboats slowed to watch the spectacle. A Military Police boat stood by as a precaution and a directing point for the water driven tracks and goats.

All goats were pre-floated prior to taking to the seas under their own power. This was accomplished by attaching a cable to each goat as it first waded into the water. If there was a serious leak, the goat would be pulled to safety by the M-88 tank retrievers provided by 40th Armor.

APCs required no pre-floating and took to water like 5000 pound ducks. A few newer soldiers had their doubts as to whether the tracks would float. Doubt was quickly removed after the first couple of courageous drivers took the dive and remained above water.

There were no mishaps and the exercise, coordinated by 1Lt. Scott D. McGarvey and the S-3 section of 3-6, finished successfully.

When the swim was over and the soldiers checked their vehicles, goats and tracks, they herded together for their journey back to the Gator Farm.

Co-ed basic training to be reality

TRADOC has announced that it plans common basic training for men and women beginning in September — a year earlier than scheduled. This announcement follows completion and analysis of the Basic Initial Entry Test (BIET).

The testing, which took place at Ft. Jackson, S. C., September 17 through November 11, 1976, was conducted to fulfill a need for improved female basic training. The course of instruction was essentially the same that male trainees have been receiving for years.

Results of the BIET testing determined that there was little difference in the performance of men and women except in physical readiness training (PRT). PRT can be modified, however, without changing or reducing the content or value of the training and without standards for male soldiers.

The original plan called for common basic training to begin in October 1978; however, based on the BIET tests, DA has decided to start at Ft. McClellan, Ala., in September and Ft. Jackson, S. C., in mid-October this year.

Common basic training will center on basic military subjects and skills as well as physical conditioning, marksmanship and individual tactics.

DA officials feel that common basic training will not only help female soldiers prepare for duties in units to which they are assigned, but also place them in a better position for job advancement and promotions.

Condors swoop down in MOBA City battle

"It was a splendid little war."

This quote by Theodore Roosevelt about the Spanish American War perhaps best describes what C Co., 3d Bn., 6th Inf. did Tuesday morning.

Dawn had begun to shed its light across the quiet "city" in Parks Range. As rays of light crept to the buildings, 15 anxious centurians spent watchful gazes over the concealing terrain around the city.

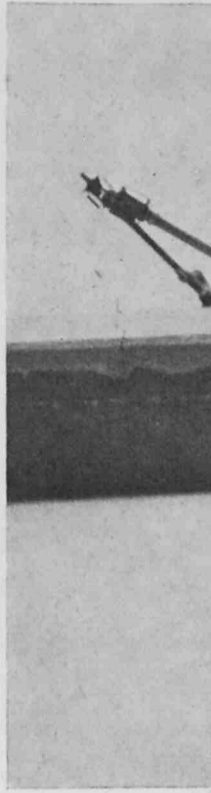

"There's a tank over there somewhere, you can just make it out," whispered Aaron West, C Co., as he stood carefully looking out a second story window. "I heard them move in last night about midnight."

Fifteen soldiers from the Mortar Plt., C Co., prepared to defend Moba City. Armed with two mortars, M-203s and M-16s, the valiant group confronted the still haziness of early morning, awaiting that first report signifying the beginning of battle.

At 4:25 a.m., the first shot was fired, after which the sound of battle built slowly until it was raging. Smoke filled the air, giving cover to 40th Armor's tanks as they moved into play and closed on the city. Troopers came out of nowhere assailing buildings and wiping out the defenders, ironically dressed in "aggressor green." One by one, the 15 "knights of the manor" fell, as the aggressors cleared each building.

Being outnumbered by the aggressing rifle platoons of C Co. made defeat inevitable for the mortarmen. Yet, each kept his foothold to the end. "When we're all accounted for as dead or captured, they clear all the buildings, it's over," said Cpl Larry Freiser, one of the mortarmen laid down by an alien gun.

Almost as quickly as it started, it was over, except for the scurrying of soldiers making last minute checks and proclaiming their victory.

By 5:30 a.m., the battle was over. No one was killed, and no one hurt in any way but their pride. Both the aggressors and defenders settled down to await a breakfast in the field.

Shortly after chow, 40th Armor changed the odds and the second battle of the day began. The two teams took their positions, this time with the tanks on the defenders' side. The struggle began abruptly and ended when the line platoons had been driven from the city, chalking one up for the little band of heroes and their new found "allies."

H&S blanks MPs for Andrews championship

by Richard P. Naughton
Staff writer

What does a team do when they collect nine hits, commit only one error, limit the opposition to three hits, and still lose by one run?

"Well, we went into the championship game fired up, and we got plenty of runs early," says Jim "Bear" Bryant, H&S coach and pitcher.

That's exactly what Headquarters and Service Company, FSB, did as they came back from a disheartening semi-final loss by scoring five first-inning runs to hammer the 287th MP Company, 8-0, and win the Andrews fastpitch softball tournament Monday.

"I told our team that we had played one of our best games, and that we had nothing to be ashamed of," continued Bryant, referring to the 1-0 semi-final loss to the MPs.

The double-elimination tournament had been narrowed to two teams, perennial rivals H&S and the MPs. But torrential rains had twice postponed the final games. Since H&S had gone through the tournament undefeated, beating the MPs and last year's champion Signal Company, they only had to defeat the MPs once more to claim the championship. But the lawmen had other ideas.

"We had our backs against the wall. If we win the semi-final game, then we get a shot at the championship. If we lose, it's over for another year," explained Jimmy Davis, the MPs fast outfielder.

"We wanted to win that semi-final contest and get the championship over with quickly, because if the MPs get momentum, they're hard to beat," says Bryant.

The semi-final game was a classic defensive contest. Both pitchers were in top form. The MP's James Bradshaw had his usual mixed bag of tricks, sizzling fastball, and always-present control. He only notched two strikeouts, but both came with H&S threatening to score. Bradshaw scattered nine hits, and more importantly, held H&S scoreless.

Bryant also could do no wrong. With his rising fastball, he frustrated the powerful MP batting order as they continually popped up or grounded out. He notched three strikeouts while limiting the MPs to only three hits.

Yet it wasn't enough as H&S left 10 runners stranded and lost the important semi-final game 1-0 on Paul Deese's RBI double that came with two outs in the bottom of the last inning.

Neither team could do much offensively through the first six innings. The MPs had their best scoring opportunity in the fifth inning when Paul Deese walked and moved to second on a groundout. Robert Potts then looped a ball into shallow centerfield, but H&S centerfielder Nelson Williams made a sensational tumbling catch to prevent a possible extra-base hit and RBI.

H&S gained their best chance in the sixth. With one out, Bryant doubled to left-center and advance to third on an error. But MP pitcher Bradshaw made H&S pop-up twice to get out of the inning.

So with the score still knotted 0-0 in the last inning, Deese came up with his game-winning heroics. Mike Jones had singled, and then stole second. With two outs, and the game threatening to go into extra innings, Deese solidly hit a two-two pitch into deep left. H&S leftfielder Larry Herbert ran and climbed up the fence, stretched his glove, and snared the ball. But as he came down his elbow hit the fence, dislodging the ball. Jones scored and the MPs advanced into the championship game.

"I knew it was gone as soon as I hit it," says Deese. "I looked up and saw Herbert climb the fence and catch it and I thought 'Oh no.' But luckily for us he dropped it. It was one of the finest attempts I've seen in a long time."

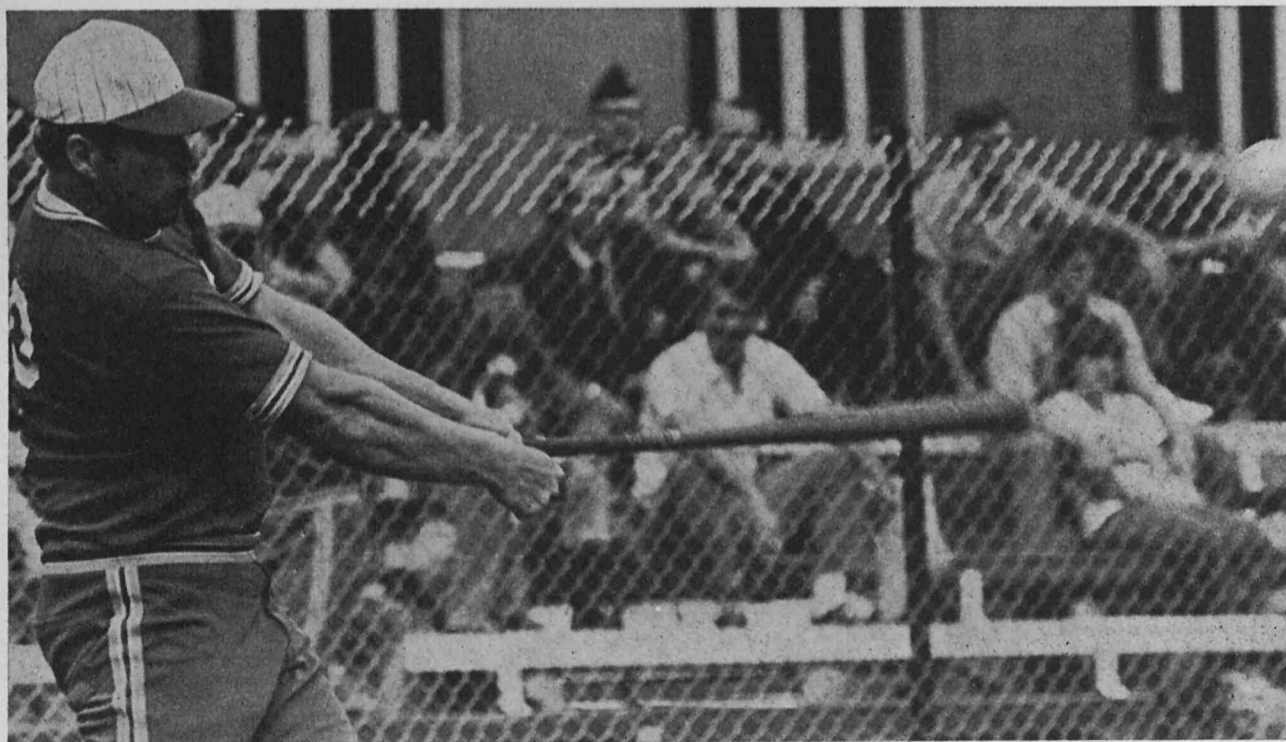

The following championship game was anticlimactic. H&S scored five runs in the first inning through four hits and four MP errors. They added a single score in the fourth inning and two more insurance runs in the sixth.

The MPs, however, still couldn't get anything going offensively as H&S pitcher Dave Dickerson held them to a scant three hits.

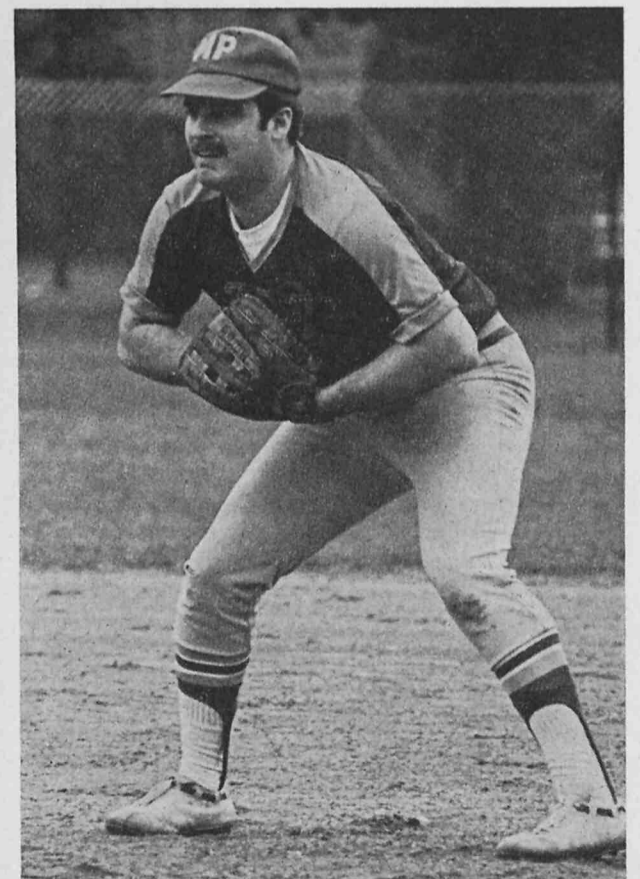

Nelson Williams led H&S at the plate by going two-for-three with a single and a double while John Indermill added a sacrifice RBI and a pair of singles.

DYA all-stars win hearts at USAREUR tourney

by Mark and Roger Thurston
Sports correspondents

The Berlin DYA Bantam League All-Stars traveled to Bamberg last week to participate in the USAREUR DYA baseball tournament, and although they were eliminated after three games, the team won the hearts of the Bamberg community with excellent sportsmanship.

Berlin opened the tournament with a resounding 7-2 victory over Aviano. Pitcher Bob Colangelo went the distance and struck out four to pick up the win. Kevin Sicotte batted two-for-four while Dave Smell went two-for-three to lead Berlin at the plate.

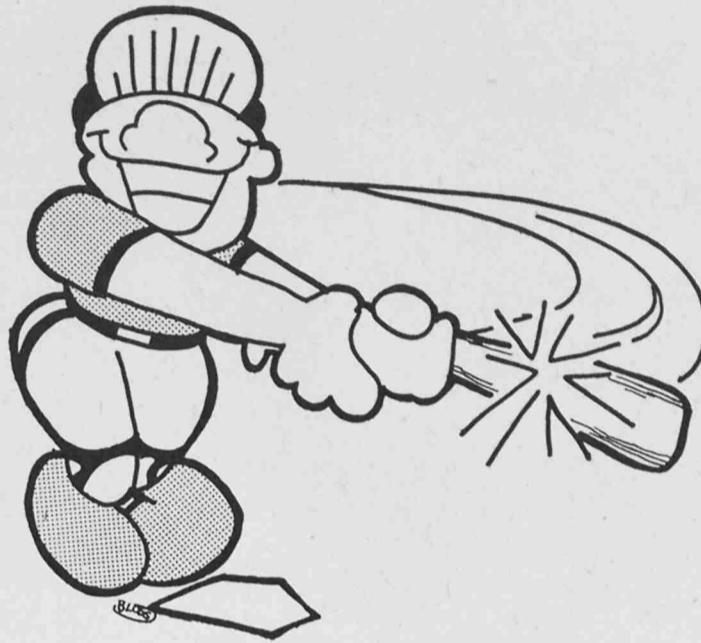

Berlin got on the scoreboard first in the second inning when, with one out, Miller walked and advanced to third on Colangelo's double. David Newman cracked a single up the middle to score both Miller and Colangelo. Newman scored later in the inning on an errant throw, giving Berlin an early 3-0 lead.

Berlin picked up three more runs in the top of the fifth. Sicotte singled, moved to second on a wild pitch, and then advanced to third on a passed ball. He then scored on a grounder to the shortstop. Another wild pitch later in the inning scored both Peterson and Colangelo, and Peterson finished off the inning by scoring from second on a wild throw, giving Berlin a 7-0 lead.

Aviano came back with two runs in the bottom of the fifth, but it was too little too late as Berlin picked up their first and only victory of the tournament, 7-2.

Berlin dropped a rain-shortened slugfest to Frankfurt, 18-12, the next day. In the second inning, with Frankfurt leading 3-1, Berlin exploded for seven runs. Alex Mills supplied the big blow with a two-run double. Frankfurt then rallied for 15 runs in three innings while Berlin could only muster one. In the fifth inning, Alex Mills picked up his fifth RBI with a three-run homer over the center-field fence. But later in the inning, heavy rains washed out the game, giving Frankfurt an 18-12 victory.

On Thursday, Berlin was eliminated by Munich, 5-2. Bob Colangelo went two-for-three at the plate while Mike Allen hit a two-run homer in a losing cause.

Although the Berlin boys didn't win the tournament, they apparently won the hearts of the Bamberg community with their excellent conduct and sportsmanship. During Berlin's final game, half of the fans in the bleachers waved Berlin banners and cheered the team on. The Berlin coaches, Mr. Miller and Mr. Mills, received many favorable comments about the boys' conduct from tourney organizers and members of the Bamberg community.

AFRC now offers horseback riding

To get away from the fast pace of life and commune with nature without strenuous climbing and hiking, the Armed Forces Recreation Center (AFRC) in Garmisch is now offering horseback riding every day except Monday.

The riding stables are open from 9 a.m. till noon and 2-8 p.m. with prices set at $5 per hour for adults and $4.50 per hour for children under 12 years of age. Either group travel coupons or dollars may be used for payment.

In addition to riding within the corral or cantering along scenic trails at the base of the Kramer mountain, instruction is available from certified riding instructors for $8 per hour and the price includes the rental of the horse.

German-speaking instructors are available each day and an English-speaking instructor is available

Fridays, Saturdays and Sundays. Instruction and equipment are of the continental or English style which features a smaller saddle without the pommel or horn. Continental-style riders use their leg and stomach muscles to grip the horse.

The eight horses currently available have been specially bred to make stable riding horses. Some are highly spirited for advanced riders, but others are docile enough for children to ride.

For information concerning the riding stables call the AFRC Billeting Office at 2535-757 or 557, any time, or the Recreation Services Office at 2535-679 during duty hours. To make reservations call the Billeting Office or write: Billeting Office, AFRC Garmisch, APO 09053.

There's a time for work, a time for rest

The mid-day Siesta or time of rest isn't simply a tradition among Spanish-speaking people. It is also a German custom called the "Mittagsruhe."

The Mittagsruhe or mid-day siesta occurs from 1-3 p.m. daily and is a time when many Berliners take a mid-day break.

Only the custom is also part of the Berlin Noise Law.

Under the Berlin Noise Law, racket which can be avoided during Mittagsruhe, should be avoided. That means no mowing lawns, no honking horns and no letting car motors run while you wait for a friend.

It's really a matter of courtesy. However, if your neighbors are feeling harassed by the noise you are making, they can call the police, and you can be fined.

The Noise Law also defines evening quiet hours. For instance, noise levels should be lowered evenings after 8 p.m. so they do not bother your neighbors.

For more information about the Berlin Noise Law, write to Der Senator für Gesundheit und Umweltschutz (The Senator for Health and Environment) 1 Berlin 30, An der Urania 12-14.

M*A*S*H* comes to life with 2-6 medics

by Gail Thueson
2-6 Correspondent

Medics, in case you haven't noticed, are a little different from everyone else. During a recent zone trip to Hohenfels, West Germany, the medics of 2-6, under the direction of WO1 David Nicholson not only kept the sniffles under control, bandaged the various cuts, contusions and fractures sustained in vigorous training, but also managed to keep a good many folks happy with their humor.

Just as most infantry troops try to live up to the "SGT Rock," hard soldier image, so also do medics live under an image, and their pattern, often successfully simulated, is "MASH."

For example:

While moving through the trees with the troops, the Red Cross guidon, which had been affixed to the side of the medics gamma goat, tangled with a low hanging branch and snapped in two. For anyone else, only one course of action would have been apparent; get a new staff for the guidon, but for medics, something else came to mind. Their guidon had suffered a fracture, plain and simple, and they treated it as such. Twenty minutes later, their guidon lay on a stretcher sporting a new cast and ordered returned to duty.

All was not fun and games, however. Though they smiled and joked a lot, they also accomplished much in the way of meaningful training. During the trip two individuals were medevac'd from the field but luckily their injuries were not serious.

SP6 Dennis Belue summed up the trip by saying "We got some good training, and had some laughs doing it. It was quite a trip."

Whether it's splinting a fracture or studying anatomy out of Playboy- the medics at 2-6 may not be Hawkeye and Pierce, but they are quite a smash.

WO1 David "Hawkeye" Nicholson, SP6 Dennis "Hotlips" Belue, SP5 Chuck "Radar" Mayo and SP5 Paul "Father Mulkayhe" Sayles apply a cast to 2-6's fractured red cross guidon. Thanks to prompt action and a thorough knowledge of medicine, the guidon was able to return to duty.
